Actions: Used extensively throughout Photoshop, the actions utility allows you to apply functions to multiple images simultaneously. You can set up actions that automatically reduce the file size of certain images, rotate and crop photos, add text, send files to different locations, or perform several actions on the same file. Image masks: These allow users to remove portions of an image by creating a transparent mask. They can be used to remove a background, object, or any portion of an image, or to apply a texture or gradient to an image. Image-editing tools: Photoshop provides advanced tools for cropping, scaling, and moving an image, as well as an assortment of tools for modifying colors, fixing color and exposure, converting video to web, and resizing for the Web. invention relates to a paper feed apparatus for a copying machine, which is capable of automatically feeding paper sheets with high reliability even if the paper sheets are off-centered in an original document insertion direction. 2. Description of the Prior Art In a copying machine, particularly a small-sized copying machine, various paper sheets are fed to an image forming unit by a roller paper feed apparatus which may be made compact and easy to operate. In the roller paper feed apparatus, a plurality of feeding rollers are disposed adjacent to each other, respectively, in an original document insertion direction, which is substantially parallel to the vertical direction of the copying machine. In this case, since papers are laid in a wadded state at the top portion of the paper feeding path, an upper sheet of the papers may be fed by an upper feeding roller, while an underlying lower sheet of the papers is fed by a lower feeding roller. However, if the papers are off-centered in a vertical or lateral direction with respect to the upper or lower feeding roller, this feeding roller will come to come into contact with the papers at non-normal angles, so that the underlying papers may be fed along with the upper paper. In order to avoid the above drawback, a platen cover may be slidably attached to the paper feeding path. In such case, if one end of the platen

Names from Deaf Tradition Among the deaf of the United States, there are two traditions:

Blackfoot and American Sign Language (ASL). Where do deaf people get their names? Deaf people living in Native American communities often take the names of their ancestors. However, people from many other tribes and cultures are sometimes given deaf names as well. Dr. Margaret Breen is an educator who has studied hundreds of Native American languages. She has compiled a list of some of the most common Native American names which deaf people have used when applying to social service agencies, selecting schools, and other professional organizations: You may find this hard to believe, but I once had a job that paid me to sit around and play video games all day. A movie and television critic would have scoffed at the thought of anyone earning a living at something so frivolous, but for me it was exciting: I had found something I really enjoyed. And you know what? It was fun. I thought I had earned my $30 an hour. I didn't. In the fall of 2005, I was waiting tables at a fancy restaurant in Highland Park, Los Angeles. The only vacancies were in the kitchen, and I got to be one of the people who washed dishes. I was a dishwasher for four months before I got promoted to a salad girl. I didn't complain. I wasn't a broken record about how I was treated at that place; I told no one I was sick, or that I needed the money; I took care of myself as best I could. But I was making $17.50 an hour, and I couldn't tell you what I'd done. Finally, the salad girl left, and my boss took me to the basement and said, "You will be serving alcohol to your table from 9:00 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. every night, and your first job is to be a bartender." When I asked why, he didn't have an answer. I went back to work and cleaned tables, and eventually returned to the second job. If I work, I don't feel like I'm a failure. That sounds insane, but I'd rather make $19 an hour and know I'm working than make $17 an hour and feel like a slacker. Working is something people should do. It makes people happy to be working. While I was working, I noticed people would drop their jackets on the counter,
