Catherine Baker, 64, an assistant to Janet Reno, was charged with four counts of giving or attempting to give classified information to an unauthorized person, the FBI said in a statement. The charges, which were announced by Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Mirick, also accuse Baker of making false statements to the FBI about her conduct. Baker was among more than 60 people who worked for Clinton's 2008 presidential campaign. During an interview with the FBI last year, Baker and others were asked about Clinton's email use during the campaign, but Baker has not been accused of any wrongdoing during the campaign. Baker, who works for the former Attorney General's office, has not yet entered a plea, according to the FBI. A spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York said he could not comment on the case. Clinton has also been questioned by the FBI for two days about her use of a private email account to conduct government business when she was secretary of state. Clinton's staff said Thursday that she had turned over some emails for the investigation into the "security risk," adding that she was "confident" she and her lawyers complied with the law. "We have provided all of the emails that were requested and will continue to do that," Clinton spokesman Brian Fallon said Thursday. "We have explained that the practice of former secretaries of state is to use their own email accounts, which were not government accounts. We don't anticipate that those will be made public at the end of the process, since they are part of a pending court case." Republicans have suggested there may be more Clinton emails that have not yet been reviewed, and the FBI earlier this week said it was still continuing to review Clinton's emails, as well as other emails it is reviewing in an unrelated investigation into the fatal attack on U.S. personnel in Benghazi, Libya. The FBI said it discovered the classified information on a thumb drive that was " 82138339de
