AutoCAD Exchange is a section of Autodesk Exchange Apps that allows users to upload their own CAD-related add-ons. AutoCAD Exchange Apps allows users to create their own apps, based on their own functional requirements and build their own apps in a variety of languages, including JavaScript, HTML, PHP and Delphi. These apps can include some or all of the features supported by AutoCAD Exchange Apps, plus additional functionalities that are specific to the developer. AutoCAD Exchange Apps can be accessed via a web browser. A user is required to install and run the app store on their computer, where they are able to install any of the apps that they wish. However, only a limited number of users have access to Delphi, C++ and Visual Basic. A developer can sign up for an account on the AutoCAD Exchange Apps website and then submit their app via their own user ID. AutoCAD Exchange Apps provide a mechanism for CAD users to download and install their own plug-ins and exchange them for other CAD users. A user can develop a plug-in to display information about specific features, such as the type of file, the company that produced the drawing, and so on.
