Requirements: Yahoo Widget Engine Reviews (1) 55 Andre Jan 21, 2007 Andre Feb 10, 2007 Very good tool Two features are missing: When a new beta is available it should be shown for a given time (like for example two hours) and/or when the beta is finished and a new version is available it should say so. 73 incognito Jan 17, 2007 incognito The most useful feature of this widget is the ability to check for new widgets on the gallery. The only thing that could be nice is a "Start Over" button that would reset the widget to its default state. At the moment the "restart" button, which can't be found, does nothing. 46 Andrew Nov 25, 2006 Andrew Nov 25, 2006 Check Widgets does what it says it does. I use it for my Yahoo! widgets. I love having a single button to install them all. You can customize the UI as well. 54 Chris Oct 16, 2006 Chris Nov 01, 2006 This app doesn't show up in my widgets under Yahoo Widgets. 47 jbjs Sep 23, 2006 jbjs Sep 23, 2006 I'm missing a feature that i really wish it had. I'd love to be able to NOT have images or ads on my widgets. If i could, it would've saved a ton of space on my widgets. 21 Craig Sep 01, 2006 Craig Sep 01, 2006 I have only one minor complaint: It crashes when I install new widgets. 52 Nathan Aug 24, 2006 Nathan Oct 20, 2006 I thought that the whole point of widgets was that they integrated and took up a small amount of space on a desktop. Check Widgets doesn't do that. The second major issue is that the way

Requirements: Yahoo Widget Engine In summary, the quality of the widget is good. As for the size, some of the other widgets are really tiny. I tried to make the size larger and it became very hard to read text. I don't use Yahoo! Widgets so I'm not qualified to review it. Tried once but the widget fell off. Using Yahoo Widgets, made me have to turn the settings on and off in my browser. When I did, I got a popup notice. Click to expand... We actually made some changes to widgets to address this issue. For one, we added a setting to "prevent popups" when the check widget is inactive. Also, we raised the default size to be equal to the Widget Layer default. These are the recommendations if you are not happy with the amount of widgets that appear on your page: * Make a browser restart * Turn off your browser's popup blocker * Increase the size of each Widget Layer tile (this is also the default size) We are unable to recover the widget from the server. This is a limitation of the widget engine, and we have coded around this issue. After a week, the widget has finally disappeared from my gallery. It is present on other pages, but not my pages. No message was given in any chat box. I had used a standard Yahoo Widget Engine and my program for that (under the same-topic) is working. I've been doing some research on this and I just ordered 2 widgets with a paypal account. Maybe that's why my code was removed. Are there any suggestions to increase the chances that my widgets show up? Or do I need to just leave it alone. Yahoo Widgets - a pity I did not come on board sooner and started using them. I would have told you more, but I don't understand javascript that well. Anyone else having trouble getting the check widget to show up? I'm using the plugin for all my sites. Check Widgets Webpage: Linecutters Description: Linecutters is a widget that dynamically draws a line on the client side. The line is used to measure the distance from the client to the server - if the client moves, the server can detect the change of position and send new data to the client. The position of the line can be controlled through the server side via the URL. The client side is asynchronous - the server can send data periodically without knowing the client's position. As you can see, Linecutters uses two DNS calls (performs a DNS query once), so it is very fast. The function of Linecutters is very simple - all it does is encapsulate a long-distance measurement, with fine control of the position. The result is an HTTP request that consists of one parameter - the line's position. The client-side of Linecutters checks the URL for the position and changes the position as soon as there is a change. Linecutters supports two ways of setting the position of the line: The position can be set through the URL - the address is The position can be set in a text field - the server should send the 'position' value through the textfield, and the textfield's onchange event will be used to update the position (saved in cookies or localStorage on the client). Note: The position can be set either through the URL or text field - nothing stops you from changing the position in either way. For example, the following URLs will set the position to 10, 20, 30, 40, 50:
