Quote: "Hold on, everyone!" cried another voice, followed by a thud. Saberslash flicked an ominous glance at the door to the interrogation room, making sure he had locked it. "If you don't want us to know, then you'd better tell us what you're planning right now!”

Hey guys, we've had a great deal of feedback around making dialogs more understandable and less spoilery, and I'd like to bring one of the ideas up for discussion:

Quote:Point being that we just.. always see what a plot twist looks like. I think that if the game is well-written people should just be able to ask the question “What do I do next?” and go from there without any social cues.

The main focus for this very early in the development, though, is the actual NPC interaction. We have built up a lot of content so far, and it's very difficult to tell what's in the world and what's not, and potentially wind up spoiling all sorts of awesome new world lore. One of the tools we're looking to implement is the ability to have [redacted] NPCs interact in different ways depending on their relationship to you - so if they're an enemy you can learn more from them, but if they're a friend, or if they're the boss, and you challenge them for a fight or try to kill them in a truce, or if they're just a regular civilian person or leader.

Quote:Tell us about the explosion. What did you do? Were you successful? Did you get it? Everything.

There's a big, big, big story that we've built up so far, but it's hard to tell what to go with and what
