Q: how to login login.php with password_verify function

First of all, I'm sorry if my english is not good. I need a simple login page with a form. The thing is that I'm running on a linux server with EasyPHP. I found this code in php.net but when I try to test it, the "if" condition is not met. Any ideas?

A: If you are using EasyPHP, you probably want to enable the OpenSSL package. This will give you a more convenient way of verifying the password. Once you have enabled that, you need to modify your login.php file to use a new call: `$row = login_assoc($_POST);` instead of `$row = login_assoc($username, $password);` This will set the `$row` variable to the record returned by the database function `login_assoc`.

The easier way to login using PHP is to store the username and password in a session variable. When you log in, you set the `$_SESSION['username']` and `$_SESSION['password']` variables. When you want to see if the user is logged in, you simply check those variables.

NOTE: This code was tested and works on PHP 5.3 and higher. The mag is sticking a little in the print/open mode. I will be swapping the grip for one with a flat black one instead of the slip on style. I have tried no snubber, and a 2 peice grip and they both will have the same issue. I'm getting the same problem. New springs, and the original gun still had bad positioning. Any help on adjusting the grip correctly would be much appreciated.
