But I'm unable to find a way to display that list in Eclipse. I can only see recently closed files. I'm using Eclipse Neon.3 and I can't see if there is a newer release out there that will support this. A: Right click on an empty space in the editor and select Show View > Other: A: You can add those files easily by right clicking any file and selecting Open With > other > Open With... A: In addition to the various other answers here, you can also go to Window -> Open Perspective -> Other and then select Open With -> Other. Okay, here's the deal with 3D printers: They can make some cool stuff, but they're incredibly finicky and can't actually make anything at any reasonable scale. They're a hobbyist thing, but now some researchers in China think they've figured out how to make them into a real industry. The researchers have created a printer that works by laying down layers of polymer while automatically building up enough to keep it flexible enough to be usable. The method is the same as with inkjet printers, but it works with plastic, not ink. This could be huge. The problem with 3D printers is that they're slow. They're actually ridiculously finicky about what they can handle. They have to be made out of fancy plastic, which can be too expensive to make in bulk, and they can't print very large or complex objects. 3D printing could be done on a dime, but it's still expensive to do in large quantities. What this might allow us to do is to print stuff at a fairly small scale, but all the way down to the micron scale. Print out a full micro-sized car. Print out a computer that's the size of a postage stamp. Print out robots that could work inside our body. This printer is called the "polymer direct deposition" method, and the

What's new in Simplode Suite - Capture And Clipboard Utilities:

(Mac OS X) By Eric Olsen, Tante Group Version 2.6.28 January 10, 2016 Simplode is a suite of four applications designed to make complex file management a little easier. Each of these four applications (formerly known as File Manager, Finder Tool, Organizer and PicEditor in a previous version) is designed around a common framework that makes it possible to work with files and folders in interesting ways. Unfortunately, the applications themselves hide these interesting abilities and try to be everything to everyone, which turns out to be a lot for the average Mac user. Simplode includes four utilities: Organizer, PicEditor, Capture, and Clipper. Organizer is a file manager with a focus on file organization. Capture brings the power of Simplode's organization to background images. Capture can also be used for capture and conversion, and for removing duplicate files, as well. Clipper is a special type of clipboard manager that can be used as a rudimentary screenshot tool. Clipper can also be useful for getting text from websites without leaving a browser window. Here is how you can use Simplode to get the best out of your browsing in Safari. Features Organize and Keep Track of Files Simplode's organization abilities begin with the file window and a pull-down menu. On the left side of the window, you see what's in your Finder window in your Mac's hard disk. On the right side of the window is a menu that provides three options, or views of the same content. The default view is the Information View, which indicates the type of files and directories in the folder. Organize by moving these files into other folders, trash, or favorites, or simply rename them. Is this 'common' information that should show up in the information view? It is. If you frequently take screenshots of web pages with Simplode, you can create a "Favorites" view, which will look similar to a folder and show pictures with a web browser or Justific. Organizer excels at search within capabilities. When you type text in the search bar and press enter, Organizer launches a new folder with a bunch of possible results! The second and third views are called Spotlight and Search, so called because they launch a search in the Mac's Spotlight app using the actual text that you type in the search bar (though a different algorithm to make it faster.) Spotlight does a very
