How I learned to stop caring what people think - angelbob ===== gerggerg I've done something similar with my career. I don't care what other people think of me. In fact, the worst thing that can happen is that I get hired where people like me. But, the best thing that can happen is that I get a raise, or get the opportunity to fix an area of the company that is hurting the team. And, the worst thing that can happen in a new position is that I get hired where people like me. And, the best thing that can happen is that I get to do what I want. This may seem like an odd sentiment, but I think it's because I've learned that my success as a developer is all about the team. The only people who matter to me are the ones who actually manage me. I've learned that as long as I have the opportunity to put in my time, and as long as I can get the most out of the position, my success is ultimately about the success of the project, the product, or the company. --- angelbob I do agree with you. But at the same time, it's not really possible to have a meaningful career in life without a little bit of ego. One part of the tradeoff is that you're going to have to ignore the idea that what other people think of you is important. --- gerggerg I think we're saying the same thing. ----- maxxkarnitschek Interesting. It's about ego, but I could definitely say that I've learned to not care what others think of me. I've also stopped caring what others think of me. ----- waxman Inspiring story. Thank you. return this.taskExecutor.getExecutor().getTaskQueue().getDequeueStrategy().poll(
